The 2026 legislative session will soon conclude as the Legislature has fulfilled our primary function and constitutional requirement of passing a balanced budget. The Fiscal Year '27 budget was agreed upon by both the Senate and House of Representatives, as well as the governor. The $12.79 billion Appropriations package makes strategic investments in education through teacher pay raises, school security measures, and transformative literacy and math initiatives. These investments resulted in a nearly five percent increase in education funding over last year, furthering efforts to move our state forward and enhance educational outcomes. Further, the budget also directs funds to other key state agencies for public safety enhancements and health care advancements.

I look forward to seeing this comprehensive package at work in Oklahoma, while maintaining state savings for economic downturns that are sure to come at some point in the future.

Though we finished our work on the budget early this year, we remained in session to continue working on legislative business, including policy measures. Among the notable legislation advanced this year are proposals to permanently prohibit cell phones in the classroom, extend recess time for students, enhance access to affordable insulin, support youth transitioning out of foster care, and slow the growth of property taxes.

These bills cover a wide range of policy areas, but share one thing in common, which is that they will make improvements in the daily lives of Oklahomans. At this point in the process, some bills have been signed by the governor, while others still await final consideration. Some have also been vetoed, and we will have the opportunity in our final week of session to consider which bills to override the vetoes on.

Through the eventful days at the Capitol, it has been a pleasure to welcome constituents from Senate District 26 and groups from across the state to the Senate for recognition. On April 22, we celebrated the 27th Annual 4-H Day at the Capitol and highlighted members' community service, agriculture, and STEM projects. I also had the honor of hosting Leadership Weatherford, and I extend my appreciation to the local leaders who made the trip to highlight the Weatherford community at the Capitol.

As the session winds down and I near the end of my final term in office, I also had the honor of participating in the legislative tradition of giving a retirement address. I was pleased to see many family members, friends, and colleagues in attendance as I reflected on my 12 years of service in the Senate.

Feel free to contact my office at 405-521-5545 or Darcy.Jech@oksenate.gov. We would also love to welcome you to our state Capitol and invite you to visit our office in Room 234.

BECKHAM CO / ARSON FIRES - A man, identified as Phillip Lain Janes of Dierks, Arkansas, has been charged with seven counts of third-degree arson in Beckham County District Court. Janes allegedly set several fires half a mile north of the State Highway 6 and State Highway 283 intersection in Beckham County. Court records show witnesses had spotted Janes near the location of the fires. BURNS FLAT/FINANCIAL UPDATE - The financial situation of Burns Flat-Dill City Public Schools is improving. "With our ad valorem that has been coming in over the last few months, we're actually looking a lot better," shared Superintendent Jamie Matuszewski. "The expectation or speculation that we had was that we would be [around $800K], but actually, our ad valorem come in at [over $1 million], which has really been a boost for our school for sure." Matuszewski doesn't expect a reduction in force for current employees, but the district is seeking to fill a couple of vacant coaching positions. "Actually, with some retirements that we've had and some resignations, people taking jobs elsewhere, looks like through attrition, we should be okay," explained Matuszewski. "We should be able to move forward with the staff we have in place."

BECKHAM CO / RALLS - A former nurse at Great Plains Regional Medical Center in Elk City has been charged with three counts of sexual battery in Beckham County District Court. 57-year-old Michael Todd Ralls of Crawfordville, IA, allegedly held a position of authority over three employees who all reported among other things, inappropriate touching by Ralls. One of the victims reported that Ralls inappropriately touched her 50 or 60 times while in the process of tying her surgical gown.

CLINTON / SCHOOL PRESS BOX - Clinton Public Schools Superintendent Nathan Meget recently updated the board of education about a new press box at the Tornado Bowl, explaining that the price per square foot has increased from $300 to $400. "To me, that sounds like we can probably estimate that thing's going to be 25% more than we thought, so we're going to try to have that ready to go out and bid in June." Another project planned for the Tornado Bowl is to add another ticket booth in the front. Additionally, Meget added that storage for various sports will be added to the track, as well as a potential concession stand between the track and weight room.

WASHITA CO / MEMORIAL - Washita County Sheriff Kevin Rozell says Deputy David Claude Hines and Detention Officer Steven Rozell were honored for their service at the 58th Annual Oklahoma Law Enforcement Memorial. "It really reminds you of what price you meant to pay for doing this job, especially when you see all the families and mothers and the children there of the fallen law enforcement officers that gave their life doing this job," Sheriff Rozell said on the impact of the ceremony. "I took a couple of my officers, and we pinned the roses on the wall for our family and for Deputy Heinz's family. It was really impactful for my two deputies to see who all was impacted by their job on a day-to-day basis." Deputy Hines died in 1932 after becoming involved in a physical struggle with a mental patient inside the County Jail and collapsed from exertion. He died the following day. Both Deputy Hines and Detention Officer Rozell will also be added to the National Law Enforcement Wall in Washington D.C. this year during Police Week.

CUSTER CO / TERRELL - Court proceedings have been stayed in Custer County District Court against a former Custer City Firefighter pending a competency report due in July. Skyler Dean Terrell of Custer City is facing eight counts of third-degree arson and one count of pattern of criminal offenses. Terrell was investigated after reportedly being on or near the scene of several suspicious fires within Custer and Dewey Counties. Court records show Terrell later admitted to setting the fires, saying he missed being a firefighter after being terminated. He also claimed to be obsessed with fire. Terrell is due back in court July 17th for a preliminary hearing conference.

Oklahoma History - The Coleman Theater on Route 66 (Miami, OK)

Lobby interior of the Coleman Theatre, featuring the grand staircase and various wall art designs, along with other art pieces.

Chase Wright
Staff Writer

The story of the Coleman Theatre is one of how a mining boomtown decided to spend its confidence in brick, plaster, light, music, and showmanship. Financed by George L. Coleman Sr. and opened on April 18, 1929, the theatre fused vaudeville, talking pictures, a resident orchestra, storefront rentals, mechanical cooling, and a Wurlitzer organ into one downtown landmark. Nearly a century later, it still works as a rare piece of living evidence from Oklahoma's age of movie palaces, and it remains one of the strongest single artifacts for telling how leisure, commerce, and civic pride came together in early twentieth century northeastern Oklahoma.

On the evening of April 18, 1929, in Miami, OK, the theater opened. The opening night clipping promised that only "a few good $1 seats" remained, and what audiences got for that dollar was a package built for a changing entertainment world: senior Orpheum vaudeville, the talking picture The Dummy, Fox Movietone News, an Our Gang comedy, and organ music by Owen James on the Mighty Wurlitzer. The next day's schedule advertised continuous shows from afternoon to late evening, which tells you just how eager the town was to keep the doors moving.

The theatre is registered on many destination tours and is listed among the National Park Service Register, which records it held a capacity crowd of 1,600 people, and local stewards of the house still emphasize the same figure because it captured the scale of the moment. Miami had built one of the grandest entertainment buildings in the region at exactly the point when vaudeville was fading, "talkies" were rising, and many older theatres were scrambling to adapt.

The theatre only makes sense once the mining story comes into view. Miami's boom was rooted in lead and zinc.

The Oklahoma Historical Society's encyclopedia notes that development of the Picher mining field enriched George and Alfred Coleman, along with Charles M. Harvey and James F. Robinson, and helped drive Miami's population from 1,893 at statehood in 1907 to 6,802 by 1920. A local Miami history account adds that the 1905 mineral discovery north of town made mining the city's main economic engine for decades.

George Coleman used that wealth in a way that was both personal and civic. He decided Miami needed an elegant theatre. That choice matters. He could have built another strictly practical block, another office, another industrial facility. Instead, he financed a leisure palace, which suggests that by the late 1920s Miami's leaders wanted more than profit.

The theatre also landed on loaded ground, on the site of the old Mining Exchange Building, which had served as a courthouse stopgap before burning in 1917. That detail gives the Coleman Theatre an added layer of symbolism. A site once tied to the machinery of business and county administration became a palace of public amusement. Even Coleman's own house survived as a reminder of the same fortune; the George L. Coleman Sr. House at 1001 Rockdale, built in 1918, still stands in Miami.

The theatre itself was engineered as a full entertainment machine. Described as a Spanish Colonial Revival exterior with twin bell towers, curvilinear gables, hand carved terra cotta, wrought iron balconies, and topped with a red tiled roof over the western half. Within, were commercial shops on the first floor and a Masonic lodge hall in the eastern half. Inside, the effect changed from Spanish street theatre to French fantasy. Local and federal sources of the time describe a "Louis XV interior" with a chandelier, carved staircases, decorative plaster, and the kind of ornamental excess that movie palaces used to make an ordinary ticket feel ceremonial.

Among those intricacies, the theatre had another especially unique feature: the Mighty Wurlitzer, a grand organ built in 1928 and delivered for installation on February 21, 1929. At a sale price of $35,000 in 1929 it was, and continues to be, a beautiful icon into the past. It is one of the only Wurlitzer's built in 1928 that is still in its original home. With all of the beauty and amenities, Miami was also among the earliest Oklahoma cities to have a theatre with refrigeration for stable temperatures all year, another clue that the building sold comfort as aggressively as spectacle.

The Coleman was handling three entertainment eras at once. It booked vaudeville on the Orpheum circuit, it showed talking motion pictures from the beginning, and it maintained a ten member resident orchestra along with organ accompaniment. At the time, only Tulsa and Oklahoma City had other theatres on the Orpheum circuit. For Miami to join that company was a declaration of regional importance.

It was listed in the National Register of Historic Places in 1983, and in 1989, the Coleman family donated the building to the city, and restoration began in earnest with public support, federal assistance, and volunteer labor. Hundreds of volunteers gave countless hours, with work that included returning the Mighty Wurlitzer organ to its original home, restoring the chandelier, and reviving the ballroom. Today the theatre still operates and remains a major stop for travelers on Route 66. The building preserves the texture of the 1920s in a way a biography or a statistic cannot. You can see the terracotta on the facade, trace the mining wealth behind it, point to the surviving house of its builder, and even hold up documentary scraps from opening night and the huge seat shipment that made the gallery room possible. A moment still captured in time where we can take a look back into Oklahoma's boom years.

Women Take 9th at NCAA Golf Championship

Jon Chidester
SWOSU Media Relations

After three days of golfing, the Lady Bulldogs came up just short of qualifying for match play. SWOSU returns from Palm Beach Gardens, FL, finishing tied for ninth and two strokes outside of the cutoff.

SWOSU closes the 2025-26 season after capturing the second NCAA Central Region Championship in program history and producing the program's first NCAA Regional individual champion in Sala. The Lady Bulldogs won three stroke-play tournaments this season, retained the Perkins Cup against Northwestern Oklahoma State in head-to-head match play, and recorded the second-best national finish in program history.

Day 1 - Tuesday, May 12

SWOSU Women's Golf wrapped up the opening round of stroke play at the 2026 NCAA Division II Women's Golf Championships on Tuesday, as one of just three teams in the field to complete their round before rain soaked the area causing tournament delays.

Freya Sala (74; +2) carded five birdies during her round and finished one-over on both the front and back nine. A quad bogey on the back side offset an otherwise strong stretch that included three birdies and four pars.

Maria Velilla (75; +3) finished one shot behind Sala at three-over par, followed closely by Daniela Espinoza (76; +4) at four-over. Velilla shot even par on her back nine with two birdies, while Espinoza birdied holes nine and 13 and played seven holes under par from holes 11-17.

London Wilson (84; +12) and Nerea Anton (89; +17) rounded out the SWOSU lineup.

Day 2 - Wednesday, May 13

SWOSU Women's Golf completed the second round of the 2026 NCAA Division II Women's Golf Championships on Wednesday, ending the day tied for 11th overall.

The Lady Bulldogs entered round two tied for ninth after the remaining teams in the field completed suspended first rounds Wednesday morning following Tuesday's weather delays.

SWOSU added five strokes to its team total between rounds one and two. Daniela Espinoza paced the Lady Bulldogs in round two, carding a one-over 73 with four birdies to move into a tie for 13th individually.

Freya Sala, who led SWOSU with a 74 in the opening round, followed with a 76 (+4) on Wednesday.

Maria Velilla shot a 78 (+6) in round two, while London Wilson (87) and Nerea Anton (91) rounded out the lineup.

Day 3 - Thursday, May 14

SWOSU Women's Golf posted its lowest team score of the tournament in Thursday's final round at the 2026 NCAA Division II Women's Golf Championships.

The Lady Bulldogs fired a final-round 304, their best team score of the week, as they attempted to erase a seven-stroke deficit entering the day.

No. 1-ranked Wingate won the stroke play portion of the championship by 20 strokes and also claimed the individual medalist honors, as Amely Bochaton was the only player in the field to finish under par at 13-under, winning the individual title by 13 strokes.

SWOSU also finished ahead of the other three Central Region representatives in the field, fellow Great American Conference member Arkansas Tech and MIAA teams Rogers State and Nebraska Kearney.

Freya Sala and Maria Velilla each carded rounds of 74 (+2) on Thursday to lead the Lady Bulldogs. The score matched Sala's best round of the tournament, while Velilla recorded her lowest round of the week.

Sala finished tied for 10th overall after totaling 10 birdies across the tournament, tied for the fifth-most in the field. Her 4.07 scoring average on par-4 holes also ranked tied for fifth among competitors. A late double bogey on hole 17 interrupted an otherwise strong closing stretch in which she birdied twice and played five other holes at even par over her final eight holes.

Velilla finished tied for 22nd and posted a third consecutive round with two birdies. She played both the front and back nine at one-over par during her final round.

Daniela Espinoza, who posted SWOSU's lowest round of the tournament with a one-over 73 on Wednesday, finished tied for 28th overall after an 80 in the final round. Espinoza also excelled on par 3s throughout the tournament, tying for second in the field with a 2.83 scoring average on par-3 holes.

London Wilson (T-84) and Nerea Anton (92nd) both improved significantly in the final round. Wilson matched Espinoza's 80, while Anton carded a four-over 76 after recording pars on 14 holes.
